BIBLE CHARADES

By Sara Jayne Harsevoort

This game I made is like regular charades, but you have to act out Bible stories instead!

This game is for all ages and can be played with as many people as you want! It can be used from a cozy family afternoon to a big birthday party! If you have trouble reading you can always ask a grown up to help you.

I have some suggested ways to play this game, you can pick and choose one or do multiple:

- Regular charades! I would suggest going through the slips first so you remember some. Pick a slip and act it out!
- Use words to explain the story without using any of the words on the slip. (Example: I got 'God makes our world'. I might say "The Lord created the place we live in.")
- Say one word about the story without using the words on it. (Example: I got 'God makes our world'. I might say "Earth.")
- Play three rounds. First explain the story without the words on the slip, then the second round say only one word, and the third round play charades.

I hope you enjoy playing my charades!

SEVENS A Card Game

By Collyer B.

This is a game for two players, using one deck of cards. Sawyer and I made it up. It is similar to War, but our version involves some strategy.

To play: Shuffle the deck then split it in half as accurately as possible (you can count the cards if you want). Each player draws 5 cards from the top of their deck. To play a 'set,' the players count down from 3, and on 'go' they each choose and play one card from their hand. The higher number wins (aces are higher than kings and jokers are higher than aces). Repeat counting down and playing cards until you have played all 5 cards. Whoever won the most rounds from the set gets to keep all 10 cards that were played, and puts them on a discard pile. Then each player draws 5 more cards and a new set begins. If your main deck runs out of cards, shuffle your discard pile. If you only have 4 or fewer cards in total, the other player will also only draw that many cards to make it even; a tie for the set means each player gets back his own cards. Play continues until one player runs out of cards. The person with all the cards at the end of the game is the winner.

VARIATIONS:

- Play with a full deck each
- Use any odd number of cards for the 'sets'
